Introduction

Indonesia is a country located in one of the world's most active seismic zones where earthquakes with various magnitudes occur, with a least one of magnitude five or larger occurs weekly.

A major earthquake followed by tsunami devastated Aceh province at the end of 2004 and caused more than 200,000 fatalities. Another earthquake that hit Yogyakarta in 2006 and Padang in 2009 claimed thousands of lives and caused serious damage to structures and lifelines.

Another major earthquake has also just hit Mentawai Island, southern Sumatera-Indonesia, on 25 October 2010. The earthquake was measured to reach about 7.2 Richter scale or 7.7 magnitude and has claimed hundreds of lives and caused serious damage to the ecosystem.

Learning from the major earthquakes above, the efforts should be made to minimize fatalities and economic loss due to earthquake hazard in the future.

The conference will provide an opportunity to share views and experiences regarding seismic disaster risk reduction, enabling all scientists and practicing engineers, as well as government officials to formulate action plans for advancing earthquake safety.
